

I am recently separated and need to get clothing or personal belongings from my previous residence. Can the Police Department help me?

The Police Department will accompany you to your previous residence to keep the peace while you retrieve clothing and personal property (within reason). If your former spouse disputes ownership of furnishings or other household property however, you will need to seek a court order to remove disputed items from the residence.